Dear Mr. Ziegler,

CuChullaine O'Reilly of The Long Riders' Guild here.

I wrote you a very long, and confidential, letter dated June 18th, 2005, in which I carefully explained The Long Riders' Guild concerns related to a 3-M product. That letter included various supportive documents, information about relevant websites, receipts, photographs, etc.

Additionally, and more importantly, The Long Riders' Guild also sent your office an example of the so-called "saddle pad" which is the cause for our investigation.

Sadly, neither you nor your company has acknowledged the alarming developments discovered by The Long Riders' Guild, the world's largest association of equestrian explorers.

All of the above mentioned documents, as well as the alleged saddle pad were sent to 3-M Corporate Headquarters. This important package, addressed specifically to you, was received, and signed for, by a member of the 3-M staff on June 23rd, 2005.

The subsequent silence from you, and the 3-M Corporation, has left The Long Riders' Guild baffled. Consequently, please consider receipt of this registered letter as a formal request wherein The Long Riders' Guild requires the immediate return of the alleged saddle-pad.

The material may be mailed to:

Thank you for your attention to this important matter.
